

Process Improvement Workshops

The Lean Enterprise depicted above has the following structure:

Foundation

People & Purpose

Strong leadership, clear purpose, employee development and mutual trust.

Process stability

Continuous improvement (kaizen), standardised work, 5S, visual workplace, TPM

Pillars

Just in Time

Flow, pull, levelling

Jidoka

Autonomation, error proofing, visual control

Roof

Best quality, lowest cost, shortest lead time through shortening the production flow by eliminating waste and variation.

Overview

A great way to get people enthusiastic about process improvement is by involving them in a kaizen event (intensive one week team improvement project) in their area. The team members gain a deeper understanding of the principles, tools and benefits through practical application and the improvements are visible to the wider workforce.

Workshops

The workshops are conducted in house by an experienced Lean practitioner with the purpose of developing internal facilitators who will spread the improvement efforts within the organisation.

Description	Days
Value stream mapping for manufacturing & mining	3
Value stream mapping for services & office	3
Lean simulation	1
Kaizen event	5
5S & visual management	3
Standardisation & process control systems	3
Flow & pull systems	3
Control charts	1
Problem solving	1
Analyzing process performance for managers	3

The preferred approach is to start with a Value Stream Mapping workshop to identify & prioritise the projects and gain senior manager buy in, then implement the improvements using internal improvement teams with the relevant workshop..

Key Benefits

For the organisation

Train internal people to lead the process improvement program.

Immediate results from projects done during training.

For the individual

Develop new skills in process improvement and leadership.

Rewarding involvement in team successes.

Who should participate?

Senior managers for Value Stream Mapping, Lean Simulation, Problem Solving & Analyzing Process Performance. Key operators to Middle Management for all other workshops.
